

MIND OVER SYSTEM

“ Successful trading is about 99 per cent psychology and about 1 per cent system ”

It's 10:30 in the morning and Reynaldo has just placed his trades for the day. He wouldn't be looking at his trades until late in the afternoon – about half an hour before the Australian market closes.

You see, nowadays, Reynaldo only spends about two hours a day in total to trade. This is a far cry from when he was just starting to trade five years ago when he spent almost days on end watching the market.

He also spent almost a year developing and enhancing his trading system that enables him to spend as little time as possible in actual trading.

“I've put in a lot of work developing my system and now I don't have to spend so much time. I don't have to be glued in front of my computer to watch the market,” Reynaldo said.
